

Your veterinary team needs your help to make your pet's visit as Fear Free as possible. One thing you can do is to ensure that your pet gets to the veterinary hospital in a calm state of mind. The following tips will help you and your pet arrive in one piece and in peace:

- Hungry is good - If medically appropriate, reduce the amount of food your pet eats before your veterinary visit. This can help prevent nausea with car travel as well as make the treats at the veterinary visit more appealing.

- Treat Bonanza - Bring 50 to 100 of your pet's favorite treats but in tiny servings. Cut them up if necessary. Does your pet like a variety of treats? Bring an assortment! Treats should be no larger than half a pea or a single lick. You might not use all of them, but it is better to have too many than not enough.

- Favorite toys and a grooming brush - Bring some familiar items your pet likes. This will help your pet relax in the veterinary hospital. The veterinary team may ask you to use these items to help distract your pet during the visit.

- Towel, shirt, blanket, or bed sprayed with species-specific calming pheromones or lavender. Commercially available calming pheromones can help promote relaxation. The scent of lavender has been shown to have a calming effect on dogs during car travel. An item that smells like home, such as a blanket your pet sleeps on or a t-shirt you've worn also provides comfort for your pet. Consider spraying a bandana with a calming pheromone and placing it on your pet's neck. When you use pheromone sprays, allow the pheromone to dry for 10 to 15 minutes before exposing your pet to the sprayed item.

- Make sure your pet is acclimated to a carrier, crate, or seatbelt harness and is not stressed by travel confinement.

- Provide your pet with an opportunity to relieve him/herself prior to leaving your home and again before you go into the clinic. Nothing escalates stress more than having a full bladder or colon and no access to a bathroom.

- Budget plenty of time to avoid being rushed. If you are stressed, your pet may be too.

- If your veterinarian has prescribed any anti-nausea or anti-anxiety supplements or medications, make sure to give them as prescribed.

- Talk to your veterinarian if you think anti-nausea or anti-anxiety supplements or medications would help your pet have a more pleasant veterinary experience.

- Acclimating your pet to travel confinement: Make sure your pet is comfortable with confinement for travel. Carriers for small dogs or crates or seatbelt harnesses for medium-size to large dogs are safe options for car travel. Use yummy treats to condition your pet to wearing a seatbelt harness. Keep the carrier/crate out in commonly used areas of the house at all times and incorporate some of these techniques to create a carrier/crate oasis: put your pet's favorite toys or bedding near or in the carrier/crate; play with your pet near the carrier/crate; place a pheromone-infused towel or bed or an object of clothing permeated with your scent inside the confinement area; place treats, or a rubber food puzzle toy with canned food inside the carrier; and feed your pet in or near the carrier / crate. Let your pet enter on his/her own. You can teach your pet to enter the carrier/crate on cue to earn a food reinforce or toss a treat or toy into the carrier/crate. Need help? Ask your veterinarian who he or she recommends for Fear Free training.

We look forward to your visit!
